2020-000021	Sarah Akerson		According to Wikipedia, the U.S. is one of thirteen countries that have disposed nuclear waste in the ocean (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ocean_disposal_of_radioactive_waste). I am requesting copies of documents that include the missing information in this article, regarding: 1) The exact quantity of waste of that was disposed of (for each incident of disposal); 2) What type(s) of containers the waste is stored in; 3) How long the containers are warranted to last; 4) Whether the DOE, NRC, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers or any other government agency monitors these containers, to determine whether they have already leaked, have begun to leak, or are at risk of leaking soon; 5) Whether there is any intention to retrieve the containers, before the containers corrode (if they have not done so already); 6) The date(s) on which the canisters will be retrieved (if they are to be retrieved); and 7) Whether there are any plans to remediate any resulting environmental damage that may have already occurred.	10/22/2019
